National Safety Council Report

On April 2, 2018, the National Safety Council released a report that shows just 13 states and Washington, D.C., have implemented comprehensive, proven actions to eliminate opioid overdoses and help protect their residents. In the report, Iowa was identified as one of eight states that received a "Failing" grade, having accomplished just two of the six key actions identified in the report as critical and life-saving. The six key actions used for the report (and Iowa's rating) are:

- Mandating prescriber education (Improving)
- Implementing opioid prescribing guidelines (Improving)
- Integrating Prescription Drug Monitoring Programs into clinical settings (Failing)
- Improving data collection and sharing (Failing)
- Treating opioid overdose (Failing)
- Increasing availability of opioid use disorder treatment (Failing)

While the timing of the report doesn't take into consideration current efforts underway the state is considering (House File 2237), it does reinforce the need for changes to Iowa's approach in addressing the opioid epidemic.

American Dental Association Unveils New Policy on Opioids

In what could be the first of its kind among major health care organizations, the American Dental Association (ADA) has announced a new policy on opioids supporting continuing education requirements and prescription limits.

The policy states:

- The ADA supports mandatory continuing education in prescribing opioids and other controlled substances.
- The ADA supports statutory limits on opioid dosage and duration of no more than seven days for the treatment of acute pain, consistent with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention evidence-based guidelines.
- The ADA supports dentists registering with and utilizing Prescription Drug Monitoring Programs (PDMPs) to promote the appropriate use of opioids and deter misuse and abuse.

"As president of the ADA, I call upon dentists everywhere to double down on their efforts to prevent opioids from harming our patients and their families," said ADA President Joseph P. Crowley, D.D.S. "This new policy demonstrates ADA's firm commitment to help fight the country's opioid epidemic while continuing to help patients manage dental pain."
